Target Fund Manager's Commentary (as at 31 March 2025)

The sweeping US tariffs announced in April mark a significant escalation in global trade tensions, introducing a material headwind to global growth and sentiment. Tariffs of this scale will pressure supply chains, raise costs, and likely prolong the current period of elevated market volatility. While the risk of recession has undoubtedly risen, particularly if retaliatory measures broaden, history shows that companies that are structurally well positioned can often adapt.

We have faced similar challenges before, albeit at lower intensity: during the US-China trade war of 2018-2019, global markets corrected sharply but had fully recovered by mid-2019. Companies with strong balance sheets, pricing power, and adaptability managed to outperform, and many diversified their production. Some firms even benefitted from reshoring and supply chain investment. While near-term pressure on consumer sentiment and corporate margins is likely, particularly in the US, historical precedent suggests that quality businesses with structural growth drivers tend to navigate these environments relatively well.

Importantly, recent comments from the US administration that tariffs may be wound back for countries offering a "phenomenal" deal, and that "the tariffs give us great power to negotiate," suggest that a path towards negotiation remains open. If no further escalation occurs, the announced tariffs could represent the maximum impact, though significant supply chain adjustments will still be necessary. Non-tariff measures, however, will complicate negotiations and prolong uncertainty, which markets tend to dislike. Although unlikely to offset the severity of these tariffs, greater international cooperation among allied countries and accelerated reshoring efforts could help create new demand drivers over time. Against this backdrop, our high quality, structural growth strategy naturally promotes holdings that are fundamentally resilient, with continued earnings growth key to driving stock prices as tariffs evolve – and potentially dissolve. Many of our companies are leaders in essential industries, have pricing power, asset-light models, or domestic market exposure that help buffer against external shocks. Several are also aligned with long-term secular trends such as reshoring, energy transition, and automation, which are likely to be reinforced as global supply chains regionalise.

After three years of derating, valuations for most of our European companies have fallen to, or below, their 10-year historical averages, meaning much of the current uncertainty is already reflected in prices. A lot of heat has also left our global stocks. While we intend to remain vigilant to downside risks, we are also focused on selectively adding to high-quality companies where short-term dislocations create long-term opportunities. We believe our disciplined approach and focus on quality businesses positions us well to navigate this period of heightened uncertainty.
