Target Fund Manager's Commentary (as at 31 May 2025)

Global equity markets rose in May, extending their recovery from April's lows. Gains were broad based from a regional perspective, given the de-escalation in trade tensions (for now) but led by technology stocks that had had sold off the most earlier in the year. US equities outperformed and are now in positive territory on a year-to-date basis. European equities also climbed as advancements in EU-US trade talks helped ease fears of recession, while expectations for fiscal support and upward earnings revisions supported investor sentiment. Meanwhile, the UK reached a wide-ranging agreement with the EU that is aimed at strengthening cooperation across trade, energy, defence, travel and fisheries sectors. This signalled a renewed effort to improve relations between the two sides since the Brexit vote in 2016. Japanese equities were supported by the yen's depreciation against the US dollar and falling yields on super long-dated bonds. Emerging markets delivered positive returns but underperformed developed markets in May. Defensive areas of the market lagged amidst the shift back to 'risk-on' positioning. On a sector basis, utilities, consumer staples, health care (negative) lagged. Industrials was a notable outperformer alongside technology stocks, supported by gains in more cyclical sub-sectors. From a style perspective, growth and momentum stocks outperformed value and quality.

The Target Fund returned 2.7%, while the index delivered 5.7% in May. The Target Fund was unable to keep up with the market's rebound rally due to its defensive bias and focus on owning high-quality holdings. The Target Fund's limited exposure to the semiconductor sector negatively impacted relative returns. In this context, the lack of exposure to Nvidia and Broadcom adversely affected performance, as both stocks exhibited positive share growth in May, spurred by renewed interest in the semiconductor industry. Conversely, not holding Apple added relative value as the stock came under pressure on US President Trump's new proposal to impose a 25% tariff on iPhones not made in the US. We continue to avoid these stocks on valuation grounds and due to the fact that they pay little to no dividends. Among the holdings owned, reinsurance company Munich Re was weak as its Q1 net profit was slightly below expectations due to investment and foreign exchange factors, despite strong underlying underwriting performance. Nonetheless, the company demonstrated strong solvency, and April renewals saw growth despite price reductions. Management reaffirmed its full year 2025 guidance. French pharmaceutical company Sanofi fell following mixed outcomes from trials of itepekimab, a drug developed with Regeneron for treating chronic obstructive pulmonary disease in former smokers. The late-stage trials produced contrasting results, with success in one trial but failure in another despite earlier positive indications. Peer Roche declined as the pharmaceuticals sub-sector came under pressure after President Trump's administration announced plans to reduce prescription drug prices in the US, a move which could impact the pricing power and profitability for major drugmakers. In this regard, The Target Fund benefited from the lack of exposure to Eli Lilly & Co. On a positive note, electrical equipment company Legrand reported strong organic growth in the first quarter, driven by exceptional performance in North America, particularly in the datacentre segment. The company maintained its guidance amidst tariff challenges. Legrand's long-term growth prospects are supported by potential acceleration in datacentre revenues. Holdings in Taiwan Semiconductor and Texas Instruments advanced in line with the broader semiconductor industry.

Against an uncertain macro backdrop, attractively valued, high quality dividend paying companies with durable competitive advantages and resilient cash flows should continue to play a key role in investor portfolios in 2025. We remain focussed on investing in attractively valued stable businesses with strong balance sheets, resilient earnings and higher margins which should drive a significantly better risk-adjusted return than the market, alongside an attractive yield and a growing dividend. The portfolio remains defensively positioned. We maintain a strong quality bias and own predominantly defensive business models with robust balance sheets at attractive valuations. Regional and sector weightings are an outcome of the strategy's unconstrained, bottom-up-process. The portfolio remains well diversified on both counts. We monitor geographical risk from the country of domicile, but more usefully, by underlying revenues. The Target Fund has key holdings in the consumer staples, non-life insurance, financial exchanges, pharmaceuticals and other sectors with limited correlation to economic growth. In the more cyclical parts of the market, The Target Fund holds a number of mature businesses in the technology space (particularly in the semiconductor and hardware industries) that meet its investment criteria. Industrials are an attractive source of investment ideas given exposure to long-term demand drivers. Other large sector positions are held in consumer staples, health care and utilities. These are more classically 'defensive' businesses.
