The returns presented are net of all relevant fees, charges, and costs associated with the wholesale investment. These may include, but are not limited to, management fees, trustee fees, and other applicable charges. Over time, such fees and charges can materially reduce the overall returns on your investment.

It is important to note that the sales charge is deducted upfront and directly reduces the amount of the initial investment that is allocated to the fund, which in turn can have the effect of lowering returns to investors in the long run. These costs may be deducted from your investment amount, from the returns generated, or directly from the Fund's assets, and are reflected in the unit price (NAV per unit). This includes expenses related to the marketing and distribution of the Fund. Additionally, all fees and charges payable to the Manager and the Trustee are subject to applicable taxes and/or duties, which may vary from time to time as imposed by the government.

Given the impact these costs can have on your investment returns, investors are strongly advised to read and understand the contents of the Fund's information memorandum and consider the cumulative impact of these costs before making any investment decision.

Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future performance and that unit prices and investment returns may go down, as well up.

Target Fund Manager's Commentary (as at 30 September 2026)

The economic outlook remains favourable with strong nominal GDP driven by massive AI investment, pro-growth domestic policies, and durable consumption fuelled by healthy household balance sheets and low unemployment. Some key risks include continued geopolitical uncertainties and US midterm election results, in addition to the trajectories of inflation, monetary policy, and interest rates going forward.

The earnings outlook also remains favourable. Bottom-up estimates continue to trend higher due to better-than-expected results and guidance. Earnings catalysts include robust capital expenditure (capex), operating leverage improvement, and productivity gains, among others. Weaker-than-expected demand, higher-than-expected expenses/costs, and elevated interest rates could impact profitability projections. A positive macro backdrop and strong earnings expectations support a constructive outlook for risk assets. Furthermore, risk assets have historically outperformed safe havens, such as investment grade bonds, in rising interest rate environments. Lastly, given their defensive characteristics, non-traditional fixed income asset classes, including convertible securities and high yield bonds, can mitigate equity market volatility better than stocks, without sacrificing attractive total return potential.

Despite double-digit equity market gains through Q3, forward multiples have compressed – rather than expanded – on the back of strong upward revisions to earnings estimates. As a result, large cap stocks are in a better position to navigate higher rates and tougher year-over-year comparables.

Convertible securities' outperformance of equities could resume into year-end. Convertible securities have an attractive asymmetric return profile, providing upside participation potential when stock prices rise and downside mitigation when stock prices fall. Asset class tailwinds include solid earnings growth, expanding market breadth, stable credit spreads, and robust new issuance. After record new issuance in 2025, primary market activity is trending for another unprecedented year with 2026 estimates residing around USD 130-135 billion. Aside from diversification benefits, new issuance expands the opportunity set of investments with attractive terms and the desired risk/reward characteristics.

The high yield market offers very attractive total return potential given its notable discount to face value and high coupon. With a lower duration, the asset class has held up much better than core bonds and remains on pace to finish the year with a positive return. Despite tighter spreads, investors are being compensated with a market yield of 8.45%. At this level, the asset class can provide equity-like returns but with less volatility. Credit fundamentals, near-term refinancing obligations, and market composition point to a continued, below-average default rate environment, and if spreads widen further, the market's starting yield is much more supportive than spread history alone may suggest.

A covered call options strategy can be utilised to generate premium income. In periods of elevated or rising equity volatility, premiums collected may translate into more attractive annualised yields. Collectively, these asset classes have helped the Target Fund deliver regular income, capital appreciation, dampened volatility compared to equities, and a lower sensitivity to interest rates compared to core fixed income.

Going forward, the Target Fund is well positioned to take advantage of robust convertible new issuance, capitalise on increasing capital structure investment opportunities, and participate in the upside of the equity market without sacrificing downside protection.
