Target Fund Manager's Commentary (as at 31 March 2025)

Trump ups China tariffs to 125%, and China hikes tariffs on U.S. to 125%, says it will stop there; JD.com (9618.HK) pledges US$27bn to help tariff-hit Chinese exporters go local.

Trump ups China tariffs to 125%, pauses others at 10% for 90 days. U.S. President Donald Trump's trade policy took a significant turn on 9th April as he announced a 90-day reprieve on reciprocal tariffs in light of countries reaching out to the U.S. to negotiate ways to remove trade barriers. Imports will be subject to 10% baseline tariffs during the pause, rather than the higher reciprocal rates Trump announced last week. A White House spokesperson told Nikkei Asia that the 90-day pause is on all countries other than China. Meanwhile, the president raised tariffs on Chinese goods to 125%, up from the previously announced 104%. The move followed Beijing's decision to raise its tariffs on American goods to 84%, which was itself a tit-for-tat move against Trump's own tariff hike last week.

China hikes tariffs on U.S. to 125%, says it will stop there. China on 11th April raised its retaliatory tariff rate against the U.S. to 125%, from 84%, and said it would not respond to further hikes by President Donald Trump. The announcement could mark an inflection point in the spiraling trade war between the superpowers. "Given that U.S. exports to China are no longer commercially viable under the current tariff levels, if the U.S. continues to raise tariffs on Chinese exports to the U.S., China will no longer respond," the Customs Tariff Commission of the State Council said on its website. The Chinese move came hours after Trump's White House clarified that the tariffs it has imposed on China since he took office in January add up to a total of 145%.

Chinese companies rush to serve up sunny news in rocky markets. After Hong Kong's stock market opened the week as one of the worst performers amid a trade war-induced global sell-off, numerous listed companies scrambled to announce share buybacks and positive messages that could help calm investors. Nikkei Asia spotted well over a dozen Hong Kong-listed company disclosures on share repurchases, strong recent performances and assurances about the impact of U.S. President Donald Trump's policies.

Hong Kong stocks end 13.22% down, worst since 1997 Asian financial crisis. Shares in Hong Kong plummeted more than 13 per cent Monday (Apr 7) on their worst day in almost three decades as China's retaliation against Donald Trump's tariffs ramped up a trade war and fuelled recession fears. The Hang Seng Index ended down 13.22 per cent, or 3,021.51 points, to 19,828.30 – its steepest drop since 1997 during the Asian financial crisis – while the Shanghai Composite Index shed 7.34 per cent, or 245.43 points, to 3,096.58.

Trump tariffs overshadow China economists' latest GDP forecast of 4.6%. Economists focused on China raised their annual growth forecast for the country due to stronger first-quarter exports driven by accelerated orders, but the projection remains below the government target and could be severely affected by U.S. President Donald Trump's heavier-than-expected tariffs. A survey of 29 local economists conducted by Nikkei and Nikkei Quick News in March revealed an estimate of 5.0% year-on-year growth for the January-March period. This would be down from 5.4% in the previous quarter but above market expectations, after Trump imposed 20% additional tariffs on Chinese goods in the first quarter. The economists' full-year forecasts for 2025 were revised upward to an average of 4.6%, from 4.4% in a survey conducted in December.
