European equities fell in March as investor anxiety around US tariff threats outweighed optimism over the prospect of an increase in European defence spending. During the month the German government approved proposals to unleash infrastructure and military spending, which led to a sharp increase in long-term interest rates despite the European Central Bank (ECB) lowering its key deposit rate by 25 basis points (bps) to 2.5%. European listed real estate posted a negative return (in local currency terms), but the sector was slightly up in US dollar terms and performed in line with wider equity markets. After steep falls at the beginning of the month, European property stocks rallied back with better performance in perceived beneficiaries from economic growth such as industrial/logistics landlords, as well as storage and retail. Switzerland was also a notable outperformer, proving its safe-haven status. Meanwhile, companies with higher leverage, particularly in Sweden, and lower-yielding German residential, failed to rally back meaningfully and were among the weakest performers. Ongoing merger and acquisition (M&A) activity in the UK continued to underline the attractive valuation of the sector, with bids for several companies including Assura, Warehouse REIT, PRS REIT and Care REIT since the beginning of the year.

German residential landlord LEG was a key detractor, amid a rise in German bund yields. An underweight position to Switzerland also detracted, as the Swiss market outperformed. In addition, the position in Swedish property company Balder had a negative impact. The company's relatively higher leverage weighed on sentiment, as did a press report regarding governance issues at Norion Bank, of which Balder is the largest owner. Conversely, holdings that contributed positively to returns included Empiric Student Property, which announced an increased dividend, French real estate firm Argan, which announced a 10% rise in rental income, and UK office landlord Great Portland Estates. During the month, we topped up the position in shopping centre landlord Unibail-Rodamco-Westfield, where we expect strong dividend growth over the next few years to be supportive of further re-rating. We also added to hotel owner Pandox and German landlord TAG Immobilien. In addition, we added UK healthcare landlord Assura to the fund. We reduced positions in a number of holdings, including LEG and Cellnex. We sold Spanish and Swedish office REITs Colonial and Castellum respectively, and UK-listed diversified landlord Sirius Real Estate.

Following the end of the review period, the outlook has become increasingly uncertain with the US tariff announcements on 2 April causing a rapid sell-off in all equities. So far this year, fundamentals have remained healthy across most listed real estate sub-sectors. We think elevated interest rates, and now tariffs, are likely to continue impacting new construction activity, leading to more muted supply and ultimately stronger pricing power across the sector. The historical standard deviation of REIT earnings is about one-third that of the broader equity market, and this stability should become more valuable as macroeconomic volatility increases. The relatively high volatility in REIT shares does not align with the relatively low volatility in their fundamentals, and this creates opportunity for long-term investors. We look to add positions in high-quality businesses that we feel are likely to underperform in times of market uncertainty.
