Target Fund Manager's Commentary (as at 31 March 2025)

In our 2025 outlook, we wrote that the equity market's path would not be linear, with bouts of volatility throughout the year. We also noted convertible securities and high yield bonds – given their defensive characteristics – could mitigate equity market weakness. This scenario materialised in Q1. The portfolio is well positioned if volatility persists without sacrificing upside participation and income-generation potential.

The US economy could expand in 2025, but tariff, government reform, and immigration measures are becoming a bigger headwind than previously thought. However, tailwinds such as deregulation and taxation measures still exist. As trade and budgetary clarity improves, uncertainty should lessen, and spending, investment, hiring, mergers and acquisitions (M&A), etc. can resume. Productivity gains, industrialisation, onshoring, and private sector demand are additional potential growth drivers.

The Fed likely remains on hold as they assess the effect of trade policies on inflation, employment, and the potential for stagflation. Interest rate cuts could restart later this year to support their dual mandate. A resumption of monetary policy easing would closer align the Fed with accommodation by central banks overseas.

The equity markets are now pricing in slower economic and earnings growth. Stabilisation in these estimates or better than expected incoming data/results and corporate guidance could be positive equity market catalysts.

US convertible securities have a favourable asymmetric return profile, providing upside participation potential when stock prices rise and downside mitigation when stock prices fall. The asset class may outperform the broad equity market if volatility continues. USD 60-65 billion of new issuance is expected in 2025 due to coupon savings demand and elevated refinancing needs. Aside from diversification benefits, new issuance expands the opportunity set of investments with favourable terms and the desired risk/reward characteristics.

The US high yield market, yielding nearly 8%, could deliver a coupon-like return in 2025. As a result, the asset class continues to offer equity-like returns but with less volatility. The market's favourable total return potential is a function of its discount to face value and higher coupon, which also serves to cushion downside volatility. Credit fundamentals are stable, near-term refinancing obligations remain low, and management teams continue to exercise balance sheet discipline. In this environment, new issuance is expected to remain steady, and the default rate should stay below the historical average of 3-4%.

A covered call options strategy can be utilised to generate premium income. In periods of elevated or rising equity volatility, premiums collected may translate into more favourable annualised yields.

Collectively, these three asset classes can provide a steady source of income and a favourable "participate and protect" return profile.

The Target Fund is a client solution designed to provide high monthly income, the potential for capital appreciation, and less volatility than an equity-only fund.
