"The income distribution for these funds underscore our funds management's expertise and capabilities built over more than 35 years now. It is through our investment philosophy of optimising returns within acceptable risk boundaries, that we are able to provide investors with income distribution to cater to their needs in ever evolving market conditions," said Mr. Fu Yew Sun, Chief Investment Officer of AmInvest.

Commenting on the outcome of Malaysia's recent 14th General Election and local market outlook, Mr. Fu said, "We maintain a positive outlook as the cabinet lineup and creation of the five-member Team of Eminent Persons further boost the credibility of the new government to deliver results. Looking ahead, we also foresee lower market volatility as a result of strong local institutional holding as well as oil price recovery fuelling the economy and boosting investor sentiment. In addition, the expected Malaysian Ringgit currency recovery may drive further inflows into Malaysia. For bonds, we still expect Malaysian bond prices to hold steady due to attractive yields and currency strength despite a global rate hike trend."
